MODEL ABATTOIRS Consul-General A. W. Thackara writes that all animals intended for food purposes in the city of Berlin must by German law and municipal and police regulations be slaughtered in the municipal abstroirs under the strictest police and veterinary surveillance. Mr. Thackara veterinary surveillance. Mr. Thackara describes their operation as follows:

Only the most humane methods of killing the animals are permitted to be used, and the utmost attention must be paid to cleanliness and to the prevention of infection in all the various operations. The Berlin abattoirs located in the perchange and of the city was built in urthern pert of the city, was built in 1881 at a cost of over $4,250,000, and covers an area of nearly 115 acres. It is regarded as one of the model institutions of its kind in Germany, one in which the most modern bygienic methods are

The absttoir is divided into two sections-the cattle market and railway station on the east and the slaughteryards and houses on the west. In the cattle market section there are sheep, cattle, and hog stalls, the exchange, various sheds in which the cattle are sold, sheds for isolating animals which are either infected or sre under suspicion, disinfecting plant, etc. In the railway station there are various tracks and platforms, where four cattle trains of 59 cars each may be unloaded or loaded simutaneously.

The slaughter yards contain the police slaughts rhouse, where animals which are ill or suspected and have been rejected by the veterinary officials are killed by the police butchers under the direction of the veterinaries; a ball for the sale of meat, three cattle slaughterhouses, administration buildings for the erinary surgeons, etc., pathological museum, and the municipal mest-exami-nation department. There are, further, au institution for the preparation of lymph, slaughterhouses for calves and sheep, with the necessary stalls for small animals; cooking and sterilizing depart-ment, kitchens for trying out fat and making tallow, albumen factory, plant for making margarine, one for cleaning bristles, etc. In the section for billing hogs there are three hog yards with room for 10,000 hogs, five slaughter-houses, boilerhouse, cold-storage plant, a building for the microscopic examination of mest, etc.
